09:45-09:50 A Message from PMI Greece Chapter
Nektarios Psycharis, Vice President Special Interests, PMI Greece Chapter

09:50-10:20 Strategic Delivery of Successful Transformative Infrastructure Giga Project Investment
This presentation explores the strategic delivery of successful transformative infrastructure giga-project investments. Drawing on global experience and selected case studies, it positions giga projects as major investment pro positions capable of reshaping economies, communities and long-term national infrastructure outcomes. The session examines the governance, leadership, agility, resilience, sustainability and social value capabilities required to deliver complex programmes at scale, and addresses the procurement, financing, stakeholder, execution and asset-management challenges that often determine success or failure. Through lessons learned from Crossrail and High Speed Two in the UK, Chek Lap Kok Airport in Hong Kong and the Great Man-Made River in Libya, participants will gain practical insights into managing complexity, aligning investment with public value, and strengthening delivery confidence across the full project lifecycle.
Dr Nelson Ogunshakin FREng, OBE, Chair, AEO Group · Former CEO, FIDIC

10:20-10:50 Closing the Decision Gap: Leadership in Practice
Many organisations have strengthened agility at team level, yet decisions, priorities, funding and governance still operate at a very different speed. The result is the Decision Gap, where work waits, opportunities are missed and value is lost. This session shows how leaders can identify and close that gap in practice. Drawing on real leader ship experience, Giles Lindsay explores how organisations can compare decision time with delivery time, reduce competing priorities, establish clearer decision rules, move decisions closer to the work, make value visible and adapt funding as evidence emerges. The session also examines how AI raises the stakes: as execution accelerates, slow decision-making and weak governance become increasingly visible. Participants will leave with practical actions they can apply to projects, programmes and transformation efforts, including a simple 90-day starting point for improving decision speed, alignment and organisational agility.
Giles Lindsay, CITP FIAP FBCS FCMI Global Technology Leader, AI, Agility & Transformation Speaker, CIO, Agile Delta

Ω0:50-11:20 Building Your Organisation's Sustainable Project Delivery System

Sustainability is increasingly embedded in organisational strategy as a driver of competitiveness, resilience and reputation, yet many organisations still struggle to translate ambition into how projects are selected, governed and delivered. This session proposes a practical framework for building the organisational conditions that enable sustainable project delivery. Participants will explore six interconnected areas – governance, activities, tools, services, stakeholder networks and continuous improvement – and learn how to assess and strengthen each within their organisations, identifying gaps, misalignments and practical opportunities for action. Drawing on real-world applications across international PMO contexts, it shows how targeted changes can be introduced progressively and adapted to different levels of organisational maturity. Participants will leave with a clearer view of their own delivery system and concrete actions they can prioritise in the short, medium and longer term to make their projects more sustainable.

Miriam Lanzetta, PMP, CSPP, Head of International Projects, Lascò

11:20-11:50 Networking Coffee Break

11:50-12:20 Embedding Change Management into Project Delivery Excellence

A project can be on time, on budget and technically ready for go-live, yet still carry significant hidden delivery risk. When people are not ready to work differently, the cost often reappears as workarounds, repeated training, increased support demand and additional interventions. This session explores how Project Management and Change Management can operate as one delivery system, giving project and programme managers a broader view of readiness and risk. Drawing on practical transformation experience, Declan will share how project delivery can evolve from managing scope, schedule and governance towards integrating organisational readiness, leadership, Champions, feedback and reinforcement into the delivery rhythm. Through interactive audience questions and practical examples, the session will challenge traditional definitions of project success and offer simple questions project managers can bring into governance, go-live decisions and everyday delivery.

Declan Costello, Head of IT PMO, KPMG Middle East

12:20-12:50 Projecting Intelligence: AI on the Critical Path

We like to believe project management is a science of predictability. But what happens when the tools we use to control our projects start rolling the dice? As GenAI moves beyond simple automation, it introduces calculated randomness directly onto the critical path. These systems can uncover brilliant schedule efficiencies and expose hid den risks that traditional human logic would never catch. However, the price of this unprecedented insight is the loss of deterministic control: when a black-box algorithm uses probability to chart the course, who is truly steering the ship? This session decodes the internal mechanics of modern AI, exploring how to harness algorithmic ingenuity without surrendering human accountability, intuition and strategic oversight – and how to design teams where human judgment and machine intelligence genuinely converge to master the unpredictable.

Zach Anthis, Professor of Artificial Intelligence, Director, Voltair Center for Digital Innovation

13:10-13:20 PMI Cyprus Celebrates its 10th Anniversary

13:20-14:20 Networking Lunch

14:20-14:50 Delivering M.O.R.E.: From Project Management Success to Project Success

PMI's Maximizing Project Success research redefines project success as value that is worth the effort and expense. Projects succeed when stakeholders recognise their value beyond scope, schedule and budget. Building on this perspective, the M.O.R.E. mindset helps project professionals shift from "project management success" to true "project success" by focusing on what turns delivery into impact:

- Manage Perceptions
- Own Project Success
- Relentlessly Reassess
- Expand Perspective

This session explores what each element of M.O.R.E. means for project professionals and how it can be applied in real-world projects to strengthen alignment, adaptability, collaboration and value creation – helping participants step up, take ownership and deliver results that truly matter.

Mariami Meladze, Regional Head of Community, PMI Europe

14:50-15:20 How to Lead and Communicate Like a Zookeeper

Most of the people we lead, work with or sell to do not think the way we do – and under pressure we all fall back on our own style. In this energetic session, Nigel Risner introduces his "zoo" of communication styles – the Lion, the Monkey, the Elephant and the Dolphin – and shows how recognising each style in ourselves and in others trans forms the way we lead, influence and build teams. Participants will learn how to adapt their message so that it lands with everyone in the room, and how to become the "zookeeper" who understands what each person needs and helps the whole team perform at its best.
